SEARCHING FOR A FALLEN FRIEND

Memorial replica seen by more than original

By PAUL MILLER

IT TRAVELS by big rig to communities across the United States, and organizers say the traveling version of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Wall may be seen by more people than the original on the Mall in Washington. D.C. Thanks to the sponsorship of the City of Seaside and The Carpenter's House church, the traveling wall was installed at Laguna Grande Park in Seaside this week for Memorial Day observances.

"We want to make sure as many people as possible come to see it," said Michael Bloom of the Carmel chapter of the American Legion. "It's very important for our servicemen who fell in combat to be remembered."

The wall contains the names of all 58,235 soldiers killed between 1959 and 1975 in our nation's failed effort to prevent the spread of communism to South Vietnam. Included are six servicemen from Carmel: Frank Antone, Charles De Amaral Jr., Philippe Fales, Larry Larson, Mark Serrem and Klaus Warrelmann, according to a computer database that can be accessed at a tent adjacent to the temporary wall. They were all killed at the height of the war, between 1967 and 1979. There are also six names from Pacific Grove, 10 from Seaside, five from Monterey, one from Marina and 10 from Salinas.

In addition to the wall itself, which will be open 24 hours a day through Monday evening, are an art exhibit of works by Vietnam vet Norm Bergsma, a walk of fame

Council divided over layoffs

■ Fight to save full-time workers, but 19 part-timers would go

By MARY BROWNFIELD

CAN PAPER clips, toilet paper and photographic supplies be cut by another $250,000 to keep five full-time workers on the payroll?

The city council strenuously debated the point Tuesday night in an argument that pitted two new council members against the veterans.

"I'm trying to be fair to them [the city workers] and the citizens — that's all I'm trying to do," said Mike Cunningham, who took office last month. "I want to take another whack at the numbers."

"I agree," fellow newcomer Erik Bethel added. "It's not unreasonable to ask if we can cut fat to save a few more jobs."

But three-term Mayor Sue McCloud and council members Gerard Rose and Paula Hazdovac supported city administrator Rich Guillen's assertion that he and the managers of each department had already cut to the bone on the non-payroll side of the budget.

"We're at the point where we're asking our employees to conduct their own janitorial services," Hazdovac said.

Douglas tells coastal commission he has throat cancer

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

PETER DOUGLAS, the executive director of the California Coastal Commission for nearly 20 years, during which time he has become the darling of environmental activists and the bane of property owners, told commissioners at their meeting in San Rafael last month that he has been diagnosed with throat cancer.

According to several people who heard Douglas' announcement, he said he would be kept away from the commission's June meeting to begin chemotherapy and radiation treatments. He didn't offer any prognosis except to say that the illness is "one of those things life throws at you, and we're going to deal with it."

Peter Douglas

According to his official biography, Douglas was a "principal author" of the Coastal Act of 1976 and has been widely called the most powerful planning official in the state, if not the nation.

Sources said his duties would probably be assumed temporarily by Charles Lester, director of the commission's Santa Cruz office.

The news of Douglas' illness comes at a time of other major changes at the coastal commission. At the June meeting in Los Angeles, three new commissioners appointed by Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger will be sworn in. (See story, page 4B.) The California Supreme Court is also expected to schedule arguments very soon on a case, Marine Forests Society vs. California Coastal Commission, that could force a complete restructuring of the commission to comply with the state constitution's Separation of Powers clause.

Flood of water bills at capital

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE MONTEREY Peninsula's perennial water shortage was a hot topic in Sacramento this week, as Senator Bruce McPherson proposed to dissolve the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District and Assemblyman John Laird readied his bill seeking cheaper energy rates for desal plants for the Senate after it passed the Assembly.

Since early last year, Peninsula mayors have pushed McPherson to change the makeup of the district's board and eliminate the public vote on water projects, but McPherson went further with SB 1529, which would kill the district altogether. He said his bill does exactly what voters demanded in 2002 when they overwhelmingly passed an advisory measure that said the district should be dissolved.

"So let's do that and then let the locals decide [what should replace it]," McPherson told The Pine Cone. Whether it becomes a joint powers authority of city and county officials or is absorbed by the Monterey County Water Resources Agency, and which agencies take over its mandated programs, should be determined here, not in Sacramento, he said.

Citing the $60 million the district has spent while failing to provide any water since its formation in 1978, as well as its apparent lack of a role in the proposed regional desalination plant at Moss Landing, McPherson said officials, residents and business people support SB 1529.

"This district is unproductive and very costly," he said. McPherson's chief of staff, James Jack, predicted the revised bill will be heard by an Assembly committee next month and could be passed by the Legislature before it recesses in August. The bill's effective date is Jan. 1, 2005.

"We're going to be prepared for a good, healthy debate," Jack said. "It's very difficult to refute the fact that this is the will of the voters."

McPherson predicted the battle will be tough and that Laird will fight the bill as he has in the past.

"It's going to be difficult for him to say he's against what two-thirds of the people want," McPherson said.

Speaking at a Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce lunch Wednesday, Monterey Mayor Dan Albert said he supports SB 1529. MPWMD director Larry Foy instead favors a deadline for the district to provide water or be dissolved, but worried six months is too soon. If given a chance, Foy said, the current board could make progress where past boards have faltered.

Desal bill advances

Meanwhile, Laird's AB 2918, which would require the California Public Utilities Commission to spend a year studying the feasibility of selling cheaper energy to desalination plants brought online after Jan. 1, 2006, passed the Assembly May 20 and is headed to the Senate.

Among the bill's supporters are Sand City, the Marina Coast Water District, the Fort Ord Reuse Authority and

Owl liberation comes to York School

By PAUL MILLER

A LUCKY York School senior, Cambria Minott-Gaines, who led her school's team in the SPCA Wag 'n' Walk fundraiser last summer, set a great horned owl free outside the school's chapel Tuesday.

The owl, badly injured in a collision with power lines March 10 at Fort Ord, was nursed back to health by specialists at the SPCA, according to Shawn Wilson, wildlife coordinator.

"Because it was an electrocution, we had a lot of work to do," Wilson explained. "First, we treated him with steroids and tube-fed him fluids, but he wasn't even able to stand for several days."

A burn on the bird's wing was kept clean and antibiotic cream was applied. Later, the owl resume his normal diet of mice. And after more than two months, he was ready to return to his old territory.

"One of the reasons this bird was released at the school was that it was basically the site where he was found," Wilson said. York School is just outside the southern boundary of the former Army base.

Wednesday afternoon, after a brief talk to students about the owl's history, Wilson fitted Minott-Gaines with heavy gloves and prepared her for handling the powerful raptor: "Just hold onto his legs. If he sinks his claws in, you'll feel it, but it won't hurt!"

With about 100 students and faculty looking on, Wilson gently removed the owl from his small cage and handed him to Gaines, who briefly held the owl with both hands, letting him survey his new domain before releasing him to the oak-studded hillside.

"It didn't hurt at all," Gaines said.

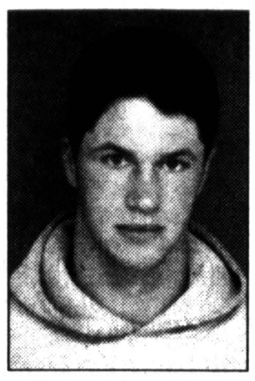
Burglary suspect returns to scene for dropped cell phone

By MARY BROWNFIELD

FAR FROM exemplifying the criminal mastermind, a suspected car burglar was arrested in Pebble Beach last week after he left his cell phone behind and then arranged a meeting with the victim to get it back, according to the Monterey County Sheriff's Office.



Sean Connors

Pacific Grove resident Sean Connors, 18, pleaded not guilty in Monterey County Superior Court Thursday to felony charges of vehicle burglary, grand theft and possession of stolen property — though he apparently didn't possess it for long.

Carmel Valley resident Mark Nottenkamper, a caddie at Cypress Point Club, called the sheriff's office just before 11 a.m. May 19 after discovering his Toyota Tundra had been burglarized.

"He found a cell phone inside that did not belong to him," said Sgt. John DiCarlo. "The phone rang, so the victim answered it, and the suspect said, 'I left my cell phone in the car, and I'll give you your property back if you give me my cell phone back.'"

Nottenkamper agreed, hung up, and then promptly called the sheriff to report his truck had been broken into, his wallet — including $185 cash — and day planner stolen, and the suspect was on his way back to the scene of the crime.

Deputy John Pellerin arrived at the caddie parking lot off 17 Mile Drive 10 minutes later.

"When the deputy arrived, the suspect was there with the victim and he was arrested," DiCarlo said. Nottenkamper recovered his planner and wallet, complete with cash and credit cards.

Connors reportedly broke into the truck through the sliding window on the camper shell, according to DiCarlo. "The guy said he broke in because he needed the cash," he said.

According to the district attorney's office, Connors was released from Monterey County Jail on $10,000 bail May 24 and pleaded not guilty at his arraignment May 27.

Potter: I don't know what they were thinking

By PAUL MILLER

REACTING WITH disbelief after the board of supervisors voted Tuesday to throw out most of the proposed general plan and look for ways to update the existing plan, 5th District Supervisor said he doesn't "know what the majority of the board was thinking."

Potter was on the losing end, with Moss Landing supervisor Lou Calcagno, of the 3-2 vote to dump the 700-page General Plan Update, which was prepared over more than four years at a cost of $4.5 million.

"I'm completely mystified," Potter said. "In an era when we're trying to save every dollar we can, we're going to spend more on the general plan? I don't know how we can say we're trustworthy stewards of the public's money."

Tuesday's vote came in response to concerns from property owners that the proposed general plan was too restrictive — limiting new subdivisions in South County, for example, to 40-acre minimums.

"But why throw out the whole plan?" Potter asked. "If they don't want 40-acre minimums in South County, I say fine, take it out. We'd still have a plan I could live with."

But Edith Johnsen, Butch Lindley and Fernando Armenta didn't see it that way. They joined forces to ask county staff to find ways to simplify changes to the existing general plan. "We wanted an update and what we got was the Taj Mahal," Johnsen said.

Their vote came after more public testimony on the plan, with people coming down firmly on opposite sides.

"The best alternative is one that hasn't even been presented to you, and that is: Adopt the general plan that's in front of you," said Gary Patton of LandWatch Monterey County, a group which favors strict zoning laws and is backed with money from the Packard Foundation .

But Tom Carvey of Common Ground, which wants property owners to have more options for their land, called the proposed general plan an "environmental lawyer's paradise. Anything you wanted to stop with a lawsuit you could stop with a lawsuit." He said it was "an attempt to control every facet of the economic life of this county."

Potter said the political divide between the Salinas Valley, where many people want growth to provide jobs and housing, and the Monterey Peninsula, where a significant number of wealthy people likes things just the way they are, had become virtually unbridgeable. "I'm not saying there's anything wrong with the ideology of the Salinas Valley; they're just diametrically opposed," Potter said. "It argues not necessarily for incorporating Carmel Valley, but maybe for dividing Monterey County into two counties."

AT&T Pebble Beach Charities gifts this year hit $3.1 million

By MARY BROWNFIELD

AT&T Pebble Beach Charities announced this week that $1.2 million of the proceeds from the 2004 AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am has been granted to 29 nonprofits, many of them local. The recipients were chosen during the third grant meeting of the year and bring the total donations for 2004 to $3.1 million, according to Monterey Peninsula Foundation Executive Vice President Ollie Nutt. AT&T Pebble Beach Charities is the philanthropic arm of the MPF.

"We're on track to give $4 million," Nutt said. Another round or two of grants will be awarded before the fiscal year ends June 30.

Gifts announced May 24 ranged from $8,000 for Meadow Harvest, Inc., which provides low-cost meals to senior residents of Pacific Meadows in Carmel Valley, to $200,000 for Chartwell School's new campus.

Other Monterey Peninsula nonprofits that applied for and received grants include:

- Alliance on Aging, $30,000 toward expansion of the senior homeshare program;
- Carmel Area Chapter of the American Red Cross, $9,800 for computer hardware and training to improve emergency response capabilities;
- AT&T Pebble Beach Junior Golf Association, $60,000 for programs and scholarships;
- Big Sur Health Center, $40,000 for a new building;
- Carmel Bach Festival, $20,000 for its family concert series;
- Meals on Wheels of the Monterey Peninsula, Inc., $170,000 for capital expenses incurred in the kitchen storage refrigeration remodel in the Sally Griffin Senior Center;
- Panetta Institute, $50,000 for the lecture series;
- RotaCare Clinic, $10,000 for medical supplies, patient test kits and medications; and
- SpectorDance, $10,000 for performance space.

Since Bing Crosby brought his pro-am to the Monterey Peninsula in 1947, the event has raised almost $50 million for nonprofits in and around Monterey County that focus on youth, education, health and human services, culture and the arts.

PROSTHODONTICS - THE ART & SCIENCE OF RESTORATIVE DENTISTRY

As we age, some of us will lose our teeth due to disease, injury and even wear, which places unnatural stress on the mouth's structure and shape. This can result in unwanted changes to your facial appearance, as well as a detrimental effect on your confidence and self-esteem.

Today, when the desire for a more natural looking smile is greater than ever, there are several exciting new options that can be chosen to restore, and even improve the natural beauty of your smile and/or teeth. It is now possible to repair broken or decayed teeth, and actually restore them to their natural beauty and strength. You can change the look of your smile by replacing stained, chipped, missing or worn teeth.

Our community is fortunate to have a prosthodontist like Dr. Monica T. Hlavacek, a dental specialist in the restoration and replacement of teeth. She has the skills for restoring optimum function and esthetics to your smile. Dr. Hlavacek's advanced training makes her uniquely qualified to treat routine as well as complex cases including: crowns, bridges, veneers, complete and removable partial dentures, dental implants, traumatic injuries to the mouth's structures and oral cancer reconstruction and continuing care.

Dr. Hlavacek is a member of the American College of Prosthodontists and the Academy of Osseointegration. She has attended many continuing education courses to remain current and knowledgeable about state-of-the-art research, clinical procedures, and the newest technology. Dr. Hlavacek completed her Prosthodontic Residency at Harvard University and at the Boston Veteran's Medical Center.

STEPHEN C. SMITH, D.D.S.

COMPREHENSIVE PERIODONTAL CARE AND DENTAL IMPLANTS

Did you know that periodontal disease is usually painless until the advanced stages? Periodontal disease is a bacterial gum infection that destroys the attachment fibers and supporting bone around the teeth.

Today, periodontal disease is the leading cause of tooth loss in adults. Although no obvious symptoms may be present, the signs of periodontal disease can be subtle and may include bad breath, loose teeth, swollen and bleeding gums. Periodontal disease can be controlled and in some cases even reversed. A variety of effective periodontal therapies are available to treat this disease.

Our community is fortunate to have Dr. Stephen C. Smith, a member of The American Academy of Periodontology. Dr. Smith is highly trained and respected in the diagnosis, treatment, and prevention of periodontal disease as well as dental implants.

His advanced surgical and non surgical skills makes him uniquely qualified to treat routine as well as complex cases, such as Bone Graft Replacement and Guided Tissue Regeneration. Periodontal treatment is performed utilizing the most advanced patient comfort techniques.

With proper care and treatment, Dr. Smith can help you achieve your goal of saving your remaining teeth or replacing those you have lost or those diagnosed as hopeless. The entire staff here shares in a strong commitment to the highest standards of care to provide you with the best treatment available as you enjoy the life-long benefits of periodontal and/or implant treatment.

Dr. Smith's office is located in Monterey at 32 Dormody Ct., phone 373-3520.

GARY D. PALMA, D.D.S.

ORTHODONTICS FOR CHILDREN & ADULTS

Braces don't just change looks- they can improve outlooks. The art and science of orthodontics has greatly enhanced the quality of life of many people of all ages. Patients say they no longer feel the urge to cover their mouths self -consciously whenever they laugh or smile.

In our community, we are fortunate to have Dr. Gary D. Palma, a highly experienced orthodontist who corrects dental and facial irregularities- giving patients beautiful smiles, improved dental health and an enhanced quality of life.

Dr. Palma, with offices here in Carmel and Monterey, is an expert at moving teeth, helping jaws develop properly and working with the patient to help make sure the teeth stay in their new positions, in an atmosphere that encourages you and your child to feel relaxed and comfortable. Many patients, rather than attempting to conceal their braces, are choosing to celebrate the experience by using colorful bracket ties and bands as accents. Dr. Palma and his staff will be happy to share with you the various design and color options available. His office also offers the "invisalign" system of straightening teeth without braces providing patients with unparalleled comfort and convenience.

The American Association of Orthodontists recommends that every child should get an orthodontic screening by age 7. Many orthodontic problems are easier to correct if detected early rather than waiting until jaw growth has slowed. Because healthy teeth can be moved at any age, Dr. Palma, can improve the smile of practically anyone– including patients in their 40's, 50's, and older.

NEW PROCEDURE TREATS ENLARGED PROSTATE

If you are a normal, healthy man in your mid-40s or older, it is quite possible you have an enlarged prostate gland, also known as benign prostate hypertrophy. If you don't, the likelihood of developing it increases as you age. And there's a good chance that there's nothing inherently wrong with you when it happens.

Our community is fortunate to have Dr. Donald G. Goldman and Dr. David R. Flemming, highly trained Board Certified Urologists who specialize in the treatment of urinary tract disorders and male reproductive disorders. Dr. Goldman is the current chairperson of the Surgery Department at Community Hospital and Dr. Flemming is the chairperson of the Pharmacy and Therapeutics Committee.

Most men start noticing changes in their pattern of urination in their mid-50s, and the problem gets progressively worse. That's the bad news. The good news is that advanced technology can provide relief from pain or discomfort, while increasing the efficiency (medically speaking) with which a man is able to urinate.

The procedure, called photovaporization of the prostate or PVP, is performed at the hospital under spinal or general anesthesia and produces few complications because of the unique effect of the laser on the prostatic tissue. An outpatient procedure, it takes about half an hour to complete. Although the patient should anticipate a return to normal activities within several days, it may take a couple of weeks for him to experience the full benefit of the procedure — namely, a marked increase in efficiency of urination.

"This is a wonderful procedure," according to Dr. Goldman who notes that nearly 90 percent of patients require no more than one photovaporization treatment. "To my knowledge, we are the only ones near this area offering it."

Located in Monterey at 757 Pacific St., Suite B-2, phone 373-4304.

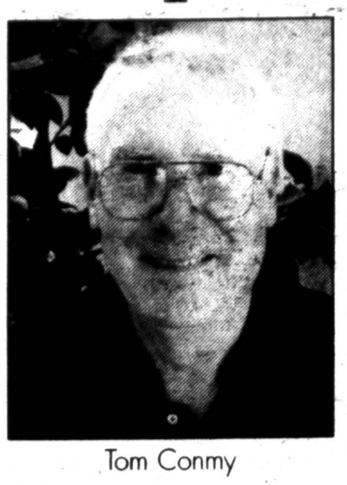
Council appoints new planning, traffic commissioners

By MARY BROWNFIELD

ONE OF the few Carmel residents who live in the middle of the commercial district — in a small apartment overlooking the Harrison Memorial Library garden — was appointed to the planning commission by the city council May 13. Ken Talmage, owner of a water purification business, replaces commissioner Mike Cunningham, who was elected to the city council last month.

"Carmel is such a special place," Talmage said last week, explaining why he sought the appointment. "I have a keen interest in design and architecture, and I'm very familiar with the planning process because of my business."

Based in Manteca — though he admits he only visits his office there when he must — Talmage's Monterey Water Company provides free-standing water purification stations at which people fill bottles for 25 cents per gallon. He has no plans for stations on the Peninsula but has shepherded more than 100 through planning, permitting and construction in other parts of California.



Tom Conmy

Ken Talmage

Talmage first visited the Peninsula as a college student and returned with his bride on their honeymoon in 1973. Ever since, Carmel has held his attention and always outshone his homes in Austria, Belgium, Boston and Washington, D.C. Upon leaving his job as senior vice president at Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company, Talmage decided to start his own business and move to Carmel.

He found the small upstairs apartment in an historic building sandwiched between Harrison Memorial Library and the Ocean Avenue Grill. He lives above Fourtané and from his living room windows gazes out on the massive pines outside.

"I love living downtown," he said. "I think I may be the only [commission] member who actually lives downtown."

Talmage has a lengthy history of serving on nonprofit boards and has been involved with the Monterey Peninsula Foundation for the past decade. He said he will serve out the remainder of Cunningham's term, which ends in October 2005, with his predecessor's oft-heard campaign promise in mind.

Reading Those Reports

Not long ago, we paid very little attention to our credit reports unless we wanted to take out a large loan—to buy a home, for example. Now, however, our credit reports and credit scores are being used by most of the lenders we deal with—including those who decide to raise or lower the interest charges on our credit cards—and even by insurance companies deciding how high our premiums will be and potential employers deciding whether to hire us.

Consequently, it is important to stay current with our credit reports and credit scores. And there are still more reasons to do so:

*We need to watch for errors that may have found their way into our credit records. Credit reporting agencies and creditors are required to investigate anything that we question. The law is on our side, but it won't do us any good if we don't actually do the questioning.

*We need to make sure that payments we've made have been credited to our accounts in a timely manner. If not, time for another investigation.

*We need to watch closely for identity theft, a crime committed against roughly 50 million Americans. If accounts are given new addresses and unpaid balances skyrocket, it's time to act—quickly.

*We need to watch for inquiries into our credit histories. The more that show up in our records, the worse our credit scores can become.

*And we need to watch for credit fraud, for charges made against our accounts by someone other than ourselves.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

By Tom Williams, CCC President

"What's good for business is good for Carmel"

The board of directors and office staff recently instituted a program to acquaint new members with all the benefits of membership in the Carmel Chamber of Commerce. Called new member orientation, the program was kicked off last month at Carmel Bistro. Along with Monta Potter, executive director, Gilda Soulé, assistant director, and Beth Culbertson, visitor center co-coordinator, I met with over 30 new members. Our program consisted of an overview of how the board operates, the workings of the office and how committees and special events work. Each member was able to introduce themself and give a brief description of their business. Along with coffee, sweets and fresh fruit provided by Ryan Kelly and Ashley Tedesco of Carmel Bistro, it was a very informative and interesting morning. We also went across the street to the visitor center for a quick tour.

We also invite any current member who feels a refresher course would be useful to attend these monthly orientation programs.

While meeting our new members, I began to think about the diverse and interesting group of business owners comprising the Chamber. Each of us provides services and products we can all use at one time or another. When possible, visit member's businesses and get to know what they do and who they see as their client base. Although many of our businesses are visitor serving, there is a wealth of resident serving businesses and services often overlooked by those of us living in Carmel. Carmel-by-the-Sea, the Crossroads, the Barnyard, Pebble Beach, Carmel Valley Village and Big Sur all have wonderful businesses to lure you to their environs. Spend a day visiting our peninsula jewels to enjoy the inns, restaurants, shops and services provided by our membership. I believe our diversity will come as a pleasurable surprise.

We are always interested in your input and observations. Please email me, tom@hale-williams.com or telephone the chamber office, 624-2522, with your comments. Thanks for your input.

New CRA president favors strong tance — but being nice about it

By MARY BROWNFIELD

Sherry Shollenbarger

EDUCATION, OUTREACH and ·ruiting new members to the Carmel sidents Association number among newly ·cted CRA President Sherry ollenbarger's highest priorities. A six-year ·mber, Shollenbarger advocates getting the ·ts, having open debate and clearly repre·nting the CRA's best interests.

"We can put out the pros and cons of an ue and trust members to make their deci·ns, and when we are strongly in favor of mething, we should support it very strong·" she said. "The city has elected the new uncil, and it will be important to pay atten·n to what's going on and make sure our ice is heard."

But she hopes the CRA's voice will not ·ide the city, she said.

"People are very prone to polarization ght now, and I'm very much hoping we can ·ve away from that but still be completely ·al to our concerns," she said.

Founded in 1987, the CRA "is committed the protection and enrichment of the tradi·nal quality of life in Carmel-by-the-Sea d the preservation of its heritage and natural beauty through education, community activities and advocacy."

The unifying thread among members is that they "hold onto those valuable qualities. We all moved here for a reason, and we'll work hard together," she said. "It's good to have this exchange, even a heated exchange, but always, I would hope, with Carmel's best interest at heart."

Former maestro lauded by Bach patrons

FOR 36 years, Sandor Salgo (right) was music director and conductor of the Carmel Bach Festival, transforming it from its largely amateur, local beginnings to the world-renowned festival it had become by his retirement in 1991. His efforts were aided by his wife, Priscilla (left), who developed the Bach Festival Chorale into a professional ensemble. Last Friday, the musical couple, who live in Palo Alto, were honored at the Old Capital Club in Monterey by a gathering of about 50 Bach Fest supporters and board members. The event was hosted by Hugh Barton and the festival's president, Jack Buffington, who reported that ticket sales for this year's concerts, which begin July 17, are substantially ahead of last year. "We expect to have sell-out crowds," Buffington said. Tickets are available by calling 624-1521, at www.bachfestival.org, or in person at the Bach Fest office at Sunset Center.

Children's books inspire confidence — even make math fun

LORI HOWELL's children's book, "An Adventure with Joshua and Hoppy Frog," is a short, charming tale of a pond resident who learns to appreciate himself with the help of Joshua, a little boy, and his grandmother. The enchanting illustrations by Virginia Holbrook will bring a smile to any young reader or listener, especially the sketches of Hoppy Frog, who achieves the nearly impossible by looking absolutely cuddly.

The Carmel-by-the-Sea author gives great credit to Holbrook, also a local, for capturing the essence of the story with her delightful watercolor illustrations. The slim little book, published by Global Books, Inc. of South Carolina, retails for $16.99 at Borders, Bookworks and Barnes and Nobel. You can meet the author and illustrator at a booksigning from 1 to 3 p.m. Sunday, June 6 at Bookworks, 667 Lighthouse Ave., Pacific Grove. The author will read at a story hour at 11 a.m., Wednesday, June 9 at Borders, Sand City; will appear at a booksigning at Thinker Toys, Carmel-by-the-Sea, from 1 to 3 p.m. Saturday, June 19; and at The Thunderbird Bookshop's Authors Bazaar in the gardens of The Barnyard, Carmel, on July 18 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

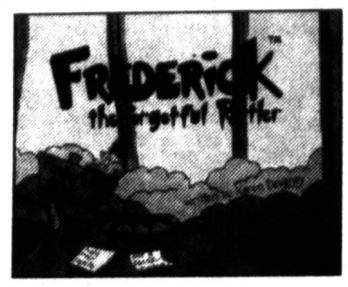
FREDERICK THE Forgetful Rattler is so absent-minded, he forgets he's a rattlesnake, and wonders where he's put his sneakers. When he sets out for a slither to the creek, he's only comfortable if he carries sticky notes and "memory pebbles," both of which, when placed along the way, will remind him how to return home. His lizard friend, Samson, helps Frederick by telling him the best way to recall something is to keep calm, not to panic. Frederick's adventures with Samson and a sympathetic doe named Matilda help solve his memory problem and he thus regains his confidence.



The Bookshelf

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

Monterey author Karen Devaney wrote the witty text, and Monterey artist Scott Long illustrated the book and designed the winsome plush toy Frederick which has rattles in its tail.

The 40-page book is published by Once Upon-A-Once-A Inc. of Monterey, and retails for $11.95, but with the stuffed toy Frederick ($8), the package is $20. Five percent of sales goes to Make A Wish Foundation.

Devaney, a former nurse who does readings for children at hospitals, will read at The Barnyard's Carmel Roasting

"MAMA SAYS, 'Money Doesn't Grow on Trees!'" by Iris Marie Mack, MBA/Ph.D., is a phenomenal book by a phenomenal woman. She has been titled "Dr. Mackamatrix" in her role as a math teacher to her multicultural, hip-hop characters in the book, all of whom actually like mathematics. Frequently students are not interested in math because they see no practical application of it in their lives. Professor Zero (a math teacher in the book) dispels this misconception by explaining how money grows in a bank savings account, with a general compound interest formula. He illustrates the higher the frequency of compounding, the more the saving account grows. Thus, the lesson is brought home that money doesn't grow on trees and that a knowledge of math is applicable to students' lives.

Dr. Mack earned her doctorate in applied mathematics from Harvard and was a mathematics and business professor at MIT while simultaneously running her own consulting company. She was a semifinalist for the NASA astronaut program, moved to Europe and earned an executive MBA at the London Business School before working in the stock market in London.

Aside from looking like a movie star, Dr. Mack is passionately concerned with making math accessible to all. This book is brilliant in its concept, and with the exception of having a typeface for titles and headings that is difficult to read, it's a winner. Dr. Mack said the font will be changed in the next edition. The 47-page paperback sells for $18.95 and is published by Xlibris. For information, call (888) 795-4274 or go to the website www.Xlibris.com.

TITA'S CAFÉ SUMMONS HAPPY MEMORIES OF MEXICO

DURING A luncheon visit to Tita's on a limpid spring day recently with the sunny, flowered patio punctuated with shade from umbrellas, I felt as if I were in Mexico. The quiet, recessed courtyard with bright geraniums and lemon trees was a-hum with happy lunchers, many of them visitors, which added a vacation-like quality to the atmosphere.

The bright monotone pottery plates and cobalt blue water glasses were set at each white-clothed table, both inside and out. They were a joy to behold, as was the three dimensional folk art on the interior walls.

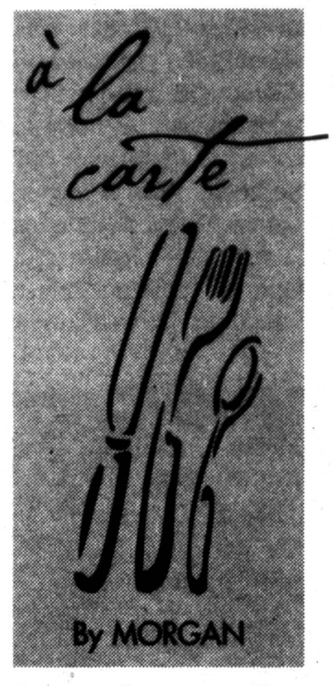
Chef Francisco Silva — brother and brother-in-law respectively of owners Esther and Steven Hudson — rules the kitchen, with an occasional assist from sis Esther, specializing in Oaxacan and Mexico City fare. And excellent fare it is.

We so enjoyed the enfrijoladas ($9.95) at the luncheon, we persuaded our dinner guest this week to try them ($13.95 at dinner): Two white corn tortillas, coated with creamy bean sauce and filled with shredded beef, were topped with Mexican cream and queso fresco. This dish is very tasty and mildly spicy.

Our dinner companion opted for an appetizer (large enough for an entrée), of tuna seviche ($8.95), and while she found it very tasty and spicy, she was disappointed it wasn't made of fresh tuna, but tinned albacore. But fresh tuna will soon be used in the dish, according to the friendly owner.

I was thrilled with my appetizer of shrimp and avocado ($6.95), which was served on a large navy blue plate in such an appetizing manner, I consumed it all with gusto.

Wedges of avocado were interspersed with large shrimp, with tails on, with a spicy dressing drizzled over all. It was delicious.



For my entrée I ordered the owner's favorite: Two pork chops fried and seasoned with garlic, topped with sun dried chili and prune sauce and served with rice and salad ($14.95). Pork chops are a yardstick by which a chef's kitchen acumen can be measured. Too many times the chops are fried to a frazzle or to a shoe-leather tough consistency. Chef Francisco's pork chops were tender, juicy, nicely browned and flavorful.

Ventana Merlot and Cabernet Sauvignon ($7.75 a glass) complemented the entrées very nicely. We are pleased to see Ventana wines on many local wine lists as they are always excellent and a good value.

Not that we needed it, but my dinner companion and I decided to at least share the mango cheesecake dessert ($4.50). It was redolent with the luscious fruit flavor and followed our dinner choices perfectly.

Unfortunately, breakfast is no longer being served on weekends (which will be a crushing blow to some of our readers who have commented on its excellence). But Steven may be persuaded to return to the early fare in the summer if requested by enough patrons.

The luncheon menu has a delightful tortilla soup ($4.95 a cup; $5.95 a bowl) and several salads, including a Caesar for $6.95. Burritos and quesadillas ($7.95 and $8.95) are offered at lunch as well as a number of specials which include an entrée, rice and beans for $9.95. North-of-the-border items include Tita's hamburger made with certified Angus beef, or a chili bowl, both $8.95.

Dinner emphasizes fajitas of every type imaginable from $15.95 to $17.95. A local favorite is chile relleno with picadillo — roasted chile poblano, cheese and picadillo (ground beef, peas, chopped carrots and onions, cooked in the chef's own tomato sauce). It's on the menu at $14.95. Also on the menu are albondigas, flautas, sope and tostada from $10.95 to $13.95.

Steven told us new items coming are tamales at dinner time! We rarely use exclamation points, but it will be such a treat to have house-made tamales at this excellent restaurant, we can scarcely wait.

Taco salad will soon be on the lunch menu, as well as crispy tacos and fish tacos. And just when we thought it couldn't get any better.

If you're yearning for a vacation in Mexico but can't get away, go to Tita's Café for a real treat in scenery and cuisine. It's the next best thing.

MAY 2004

Carmel Valley

Historic car-abunda fuels passions

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE PENINSULA'S historic car week is three months away, but planning for its many events is well under way and changes are afoot, including ownership of the Concorso Italiano and the evolution of a fledgling gathering.

The Quail — "The Q" for short — debuted at Quail Lodge last year as an intimate gathering of automotive enthusiasts and is expanding in 2004. In addition to its tribute to the famous Italian long-distance race, the Mille Miglia, The Q will feature 125 prewar and postwar sports and racing cars and motorcycles. New this year will be the "Four corners of the world," showcasing fine foods and wines from Germany, Italy, France and Northern California prepared by chefs Cal Stamenov and Jeff Rogers. The Bonhams & Butterfields auction will also be open to Quail guests and sponsors, according to special events coordinator Amy Williams.

"The event fuels so many different passions," she said.

Organizers hope to woo 100 volunteers to assist with the Aug. 12 setup and the Aug. 13 event. In exchange for eight hours of work either day (or four hours split between the two), volunteers will receive a complimentary $150 admission ticket, a discount for a friend, and a host of other perquisites. Youths may volunteer on Thursday only and will earn community service credits. The event benefits the Friends of the Carmel Unified School District and the 11-99 Foundation, which aids the families of California Highway Patrol officers killed in the line of duty.

Anyone interested in volunteering should e-mail thequailvolunteers@yahoo.com. Tickets are on sale at (877) 734-4628, and children under 12 will be admitted free. For more information, visit www.quaillodge.com.

Concorso's new owners

Concorso Italiano, the celebration of Italian finery founded and run for 18 years by Frank and Janet Mandarano, is being sold to Jack and Leslie Wadsworth. The two couples are serving as event co-chairs during the transition this year.

"I'm about customer service. You can't please everybody, but when you try and show you're earnest, it comes out in what people feel about the event and how people feel about your business," Jack Wadsworth said. "We're excited we're bringing our little twist to Concorso Italiano."

Celebrating the 50th anniversaries of the Alfa Romeo Giullietta and the American debut of Ferrari, the Aug. 13 show will also present the United States debut of the Lamborghini Murciélago Roadster.

Learning from last year's move to Black Horse Golf Course in Seaside, organizers will offer onsite parking for all ticket holders — eliminating the need for busing — and the golf clubhouse kitchen will provide more food vendor stations. Additional restrooms will also be available.

Three separate parking areas for participants and vendors, advance ticket holders and those who purchase admission that day will be accessed via different routes, reducing traffic tie-ups, according to Wadsworth.

Tickets are $80 until July 15; $100 the day of the event. Children under 12 are free, and a portion of the proceeds will benefit Peninsula charities. Wadsworth encouraged spectators to avoid lines and take advantage of VIP reserved parking by purchasing tickets in advance at (206) 232-0365 or online at www.concorso.com. Admission to the Kruse auction that evening is included.

P.G. rally honors Ferrari

The Pacific Grove Auto Rally, 10 years old Aug. 13, will honor the venerable Italian marque, Ferrari, this year in a nod to the Monterey Historic Automobile Races. Featuring vintage vehicles and sports cars, the rally has raised more than $50,000 for Peninsula youth charities.

More than 200 cars participate, and thousands of spectators line the tour route from Lighthouse Avenue through Pebble Beach, Carmel and Monterey. An awards barbecue dinner will follow at P.G.'s historic Chautauqua Hall.

Participants may register online at www.pgautorally.com or call 647-6355.

31st annual historic races

The weekend's biggest draw will likely be the Rolex Monterey Historic Automobile Races, running Aug. 13-15. Started 31 years ago by Steve Earle with several dozen racers and a handful of spectators, the Historics now host almost 400 cars representing nearly every era of automotive history. The 14 classes — seven on Saturday and seven on Sunday — are divided by displacement and year.

Last year, organizers honored the 100th anniversary of Ford; this year, they named its 1960s racing nemesis, Ferrari,

CORRECTION

LAST WEEK'S story about the Carmel Valley Land Use Advisory Committee's May 17 meeting regarding the proposed Rancho Cañada Village erroneously reported that the committee approved the 280-unit proposal. In fact, the committee deferred action until completion of an environmental impact report.

Concours, Christie's finery

The pinnacle of historic car weekend, the world-famous Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance, will celebrate its 54th anniversary on the 18th Fairway of the Pebble Beach Golf Links Sunday, Aug. 15.

Featured marques will include Rolls-Royce, Ferrari and Hispano-Suiza, which turns 100 this year. Invitations to enter a car in the Concours are rare and coveted among collectors, and a limited number of spectators watch the meticulous judging and awards ceremony. Tickets, $100, must be purchased in advance by calling United Way toll-free at (877) 693-0009. For more information visit www.pebblebeachconcours.net.

Organizers will also host the increasingly popular Tour d'Elegance Aug. 12. The Tour takes more than 100 Concours-entered cars and drivers on a 50-mile route through the Peninsula, with a lunch stop in downtown Carmel. As drivers and other VIPs dine, spectators walk among the rare automobiles parked along Ocean Avenue — enjoying a portion of the Concours experience for free.

And that evening, the festivities will continue with the Christie's Exceptional Motor Cars auction, being held for the first time on a Thursday to kick off the automotive weekend rather than end it.

This year also marks a new venue for the sale. The Monterey Jet Center, with its 112,000-square-foot hangar and 10 surrounding acres, will provide ample space to showcase the auction.

BUDGET

The council took no action when it discussed the proposed $10.95 million budget May 25, though members directed Guillen to reexamine expenses in hopes of culling enough cash to save even one full-time job among the five on the chopping block. Council members reluctantly conceded 19 part-time employees — including 11 from the library — would probably have to go.

May 25 marked the council's first discussion of the proposed budget, developed by Guillen, city treasurer Charles Reiman, CPA Paul Wood and acting financial services coordinator Cheryl Panattoni. The budget calls for a 10 percent cut in supplies and services to each department and a $1 million reduction in city jobs beyond those already vacated through attrition.

"This is what I feel is necessary to keep this city financially stable," Guillen said.

Several in the standing-room-only audience pleaded with the council to avoid depriving visitors and residents of services and hurting city workers and their families.

Calling the library "the heart of the city," several people decried the job losses, which would lead to cuts in hours and programs. Others protested selling Flanders Mansion.

"It's Economics 101: To sell assets that are appreciating to support assets that are depreciating is financially irresponsible," former mayor Charlotte Townsend said. "Not to mention the enormous cultural loss."

But two speakers supported selling the aging house because keeping it costs the city more as it continues to deteriorate.

"Every time I come to a council meeting, I find a concerted effort to make Flanders look like a silk purse," Clay Berling commented. "After 30-plus years, five committees have looked at Flanders to find a reasonable use, and all came up with nothing."

Larry Rodocker's lengthy list of suggestions included saving $40,000 in courier services by having police officers deliver mail to housebound residents three times a week.

'I haven't seen a budget yet that's $4 million that couldn't be $3.75 million without sinking the ship.'

— Mike Cunningham

Pleading for jobs

One vacant job that won't be filled is for a full-time police officer. Carmel Police Cpl. Steve Rana told the council it should keep in mind the importance of a strong police force.

"There are times when police work is unpredictable," he said, adding that dedicated officers have helped prevent tragedy.

Public works and forestry administrative coordinator Margi Perotti asked the council to remember those who fill potholes, trim trees and assist other departments.

"We're the little people who take care of the things you don't see," such as setting up tables for recreation department events, she said. "We support everyone."

Speakers also pitched new revenue sources, such as increasing the hotel tax, but council members said any new income generators would not affect the 2004/2005 budget, which takes effect July 1. Instead, the council pledged to discuss all possible moneymakers after the budget is adopted.

"We're not going to find something that pleases everyone," McCloud said, adding that paid parking would have raised $1.4 million a year for the city, but the plan was unpopular and got shelved as a result. "That would have solved all of these problems."

She said she hopes city residents would be more receptive in light of the current economy and urged them to "look at what will work and not at why they don't work."

After accepting Guillen's projected revenues — mostly from sales tax, transient occupancy tax and property tax — the council sparred over proposed cuts.

"Are you satisfied, as I am, that Rich brought in the department heads and hammered to the point where there is nothing left to cut?" Rose asked. "We can stay here all night and talk about each item, but I don't think that needs to be done. It's already been done."

Cunningham said the $4.58 million materials and services budget should be reduced. "I haven't seen a budget yet that's $4 million that couldn't be $3.75 million without sinking the ship."

Guillen said there's simply nowhere left to cut and said the council would be "micromanaging" if it began scrutinizing amounts of paper supplies or other lesser expenses.

"I would feel better with another round of scrubbing every dollar," Cunningham said.

"I would feel better, too, but I don't think the outcome will be different," Hazdovac replied. "The numbers have been scrubbed and scrubbed and scrubbed, and we're fooling ourselves if we think we will just come up with the extra money."

Council members decided not to cut the city's discretionary expenses, such as mail delivery, the Carmel Youth Center grant and destination marketing, though they asked Guillen to research how past councils had spent the $50,000 specifically earmarked for the council's own discretion.

The council also supported the budget's use of $588,000 from capital reserves to replace old equipment and take care of deferred maintenance projects, several of which will bring matching grants. "If we have a town that's falling apart, nobody's going to want to come here," Bethel said. "We have to invest in our infrastructure."

Upon questioning, Guillen said the firehouse retrofit was not included because its costs are unknown, but the council reserves the right to amend the budget later.

McCloud argued against cutting the cleaning of public restrooms, since their state is already a top-five complaint from residents and visitors.

Ultimately, the council acknowledged the need to lay off part-time workers and asked Guillen to examine expenses again.

"After that, something of this magnitude will require a unanimous vote," McCloud said before asking Bethel and Cunningham to comb through the budget and give their suggested cuts to Guillen before the next budget hearing at 4:30 p.m. June 3.

COMMISSIONERS

"I don't come with any agenda — just to listen carefully and decide fairly," he said. "Those words are Mike Cunningham's, but this is his seat. That's what he did, and that's what I will attempt to do."

Tom Conmy on traffic

The council also appointed Crespi resident Tom Conmy to replace newly elected councilman Erik Bethel on the Carmel Community Traffic Safety Commission.

A retired packaging materials broker, Conmy has lived in Carmel for 14 years. He said he first encountered the commission when he reported the dangers of turning from Mountain View onto Crespi, where parked cars made it a blind intersection too narrow for emergency vehicles to pass.

"I contacted the commission and they came right out and fixed it, and I was so impressed," he said.

And as vehicles get larger, traffic safety on Carmel's narrow streets is a growing concern, while parking and speeding are perennial problems.

"It's not new, but it's something they have to always work on, and my goal is just to contribute as best I can — to observe and bring to the attention of the commission things I see that they might not," he said.

Prior to his retirement last year, Conmy was president of Tom Conmy & Associates. He worked in sales and marketing for Crown Zellerback/James River Corp. from 1967 to 1989 and before that assisted Pacific National Bank in business development. He has volunteered as a server at a soup kitchen in Seaside for two years. His term on the traffic safety commission will end in September 2006.

CRA

Residents should attend city council meetings and find a group that reflects their interests, whether it be the CRA, the Carmel Chamber of Commerce, the business community as a whole, Yes! for Carmel, or a host of others, Shollenbarger advised.

"We need to be very active in this city and where we differ, allow for differences," she said.

As co-chair of the CRA's issues committee for the last two years, Shollenbarger has helped select monthly speakers and keep the group's 344 members informed.

She hopes upcoming speakers will attract new members to the group, which includes newly elected councilman Mike Cunningham. His fellow vote-winner, Erik Bethel, has inquired about membership, according to Shollenbarger.

A former psychiatric nurse, Shollenbarger and her husband, David, then a surgeon, bought their Carmel home in 1989 but fell in love with the area the first time they saw it shortly after they were married in 1965. Upon retiring, they moved here from Los Angeles, and she joined the CRA in 1998. Shollenbarger has also served at Hospice and as a docent at Tor House.

"The reason I'm a member and the reason I'm active is I feel it's a form of accountability as a citizen to be aware of what's going on, to be informed and have input," she said. Being involved in causes she supports reflects her views, "so that I'm not just an innocent bystander."

According to its website, the CRA "welcomes to membership all residents of Carmel-by-the-Sea and its 'sphere of influence,' those who own second homes here, and members of the local business community who realize that their interests and those of the residents often coincide." To join, print and mail the application form at www.carmel-residents.org or find one in the group's current newsletter. Dues are $20 for an individual and $30 for a family, with additional options for contributing more. Send mail to CRA, P.O. Box 13, Carmel, CA 93921.

California American Water
water conservation notice
It's been unusually hot and dry on the Monterey Peninsula.
As a result, water consumption is higher than normal — in fact, the highest since 1987. That's a special challenge here because the state strictly limits water use on the Monterey Peninsula. The state could impose fines of up to $3 million if we exceed the limit. The best way to avoid fines is to eliminate water waste. Here are some ideas on how you can help:
■ Plant drought-tolerant flowers, shrubs, and trees. Dozens of California-friendly plants can beautify your yard while reducing landscape water use.
■ Use a broom — not your hose — to clean sidewalks and driveways at home and work.
■ Run dishwashers and washing machines only when you have a full load.
■ Take a brief shower instead of filling a bathtub.
■ Restaurants should serve water only upon customer request.
Using water wisely is everyone's responsibility. Working together we can reduce water use and avoid penalties from the state. For more water saving tips, give us a call at (888) 237-1333 or visit our website at www.calamwater.com.

OPINION

Editorial

What's the truth about California?

EVERY ONCE in a while, a news story appears that undermines pretty much everything else we've learned from the media on a given subject.

That was certainly true with a May 12 story in the San Francisco Chronicle and again in the May 27 Monterey County Herald that immigrants from Mexico to the United States have longer life expectancies than whites who are born in this country, according to a study by the National Institutes of Health. A first-generation Mexican immigrant can expect to live 81.1 years, The Chronicle reported, while a native-born white, on average, gets just 77.7 years, based on mortality rates from 1986-1994.

The news stories called the study "surprising," "astonishing," "counterintuitive," and said it "challenges some common beliefs."

Perhaps that's because those same media outlets feed their readers a steady diet of stories of new Hispanic immigrants to this country being mistreated, underpaid, undernourished and poisoned with pesticides on the job while living in overcrowded, substandard housing, being murdered by criminal gangs and denied access to health care.

"People have a misconception that immigrants have poorer health, but when you look at the empirical data, you almost always find they do better than their native counterparts," said Gopal K. Singh, an NIH statistician, according to the Herald.

How to explain this? The Chronicle has carried dozens of stories over the years about Mexican immigrant farmworkers sickened by exposure to pesticides in the fields. Just this week, an item from Bakersfield told of 18 workers hit with "pesticide drift" in a peach orchard. The chemical was related to nerve-gas and can cause "unconsciousness, seizures and death," the paper reported. And the incident was by no means unusual. In 2002, the story continued, more than 1,300 "poor, Hispanic immigrants who speak little English ... and are afraid to ask the government for help," were poisoned with pesticides as 172 million pounds of the chemicals were used around the state.

Another story last year reported that "about 30 percent of Hispanic Americans lack a usual source of health care ... compared with less than 16 percent of whites," and that far fewer elderly Mexicans in California reported they were in good health, compared to whites and Asians.

Obviously, either the life-expectancy study is wrong, or many of the other news stories have been exaggerated. Perhaps tales of hard-working, law-abiding, church-going, non-smoking Mexican families who exercise and watch what they eat should start to be considered news.

Americans have a tendency to believe the worst about their own country, and the news media are all too willing to be their enablers.

But maybe things aren't as bad as we've been told all these years.

Letters to the Editor

'Concern for the future'

Dear Editor,

The Carmel Public Library Foundation has been providing financial support to Harrison Memorial Library for almost 14 years. More than 780 area residents have demonstrated the importance our library has in their lives by contributing on an annual basis to fund books, equipment, and special programs.

We support the Harrison Memorial Library Board of Trustees in their efforts to achieve the goals outlined in their strategic plan. To accomplish these goals requires not only the funds provided by the foundation but also the support of the city in providing adequate staff to implement these goals.

We know our mayor and council members understand the importance their budget decisions will have on how others view Carmel's attitudes toward lifelong learning, education, encouraging young people to read and providing services for senior citizens. We emphasize the significant role our library plays in our community by paraphrasing Carl Sagan; a community's concern for the future can be measured by how well it supports its library. Harrison Memorial Library plays a pivotal role in the quality of life for the residents of Carmel-by-the-Sea and the surrounding communities. We trust that our city council will consider the value our supporters place on having a quality library when struggling with the necessary budget issues.

Tom Parks, President, Carmel Public Library Foundation

Sickening news

Dear Editor,

It sickens me to hear on the news of the city's plans to sell Flanders Mansion and the Scout House. As an artist growing up in this area, I've come to appreciate what makes the town and the area we live in unique. It is the job of the city to protect its uniqueness and not go for quick financial answers.

Flanders Mansion is a place with great potential for the public good and the artistic community. Once home of the Carmel Art Institute, its unique Tudor style has qualified for national preservation status. The Flanders Foundation received a grant from the National Heritage Society proving its importance as a national treasure.

Approximately eight years ago I testified to the city council about the history of the Flanders mansion. Most members of that council are no longer serving, but the mayor

DISSOLVE

Monterey County Supervisor Lou Calcagno.

With the county and Cal-Am contemplating desalination at Moss Landing, the idea of cheaper energy is enticing. The cost of desal has dropped over the years, but power remains a major expense.

That issue, as well as environmental benefits and drawbacks, permitting, regulatory concerns and other topics, were discussed by more than a dozen experts at a day-long conference on desalination last Thursday.

Hosted by the Association of Monterey Bay Area Governments and the Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary, and sponsored by a host of other organizations, the workshop attracted almost 200 people.

With nine potential projects of various sizes within the constant, and with conventional water supplies constant or dropping throughout the state, more districts, utilities and private individuals are turning to desal.

"By 2030, California is projected to have 17 million more people," said Dr. Fawzi Karajeh, chief of the water recycling and desalination branch of the California Department of Water Resources. "But conventional sources will remain relatively constant."

Given that, Karajeh said the state developed 24 alternative strategies last year.

"Non-conventional sources like desalination and recycling are reliable, drought-proof and high-quality because of technological developments," he said.

To my readers,

Sam Morse gave artist Jo Mora two-and-one-half acres of Pebble Beach. In Carmel Frank Powers offered the artist an entire city block to live here.

After thirty-two years of putting a little joy in the lives of Carmelites through my weekly cartoons in the Pine Cone I still cannot afford to live in the village where I belong.

Is there a present day Sam Morse or Frank Powers out there who can step up with a house for me and my family? If you have a solution our phone number is 656-9966.

Yours Sincerely,

Bill Bates

The Parks, Open Space and Coastal Preservation Measure for the Monterey Peninsula

If you own property within the boundaries of the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District, you should have received your mail ballot already.

The measure is supported by a coalition of government, business, environmental and community leaders. It will preserve and protect our most important environmental and natural resources, now and for future generations.

The funds raised would go primarily for sustaining and maintaining the quality of existing parks and open space. Over its 31-year history, The Park District has preserved over 20,000 acres throughout the Peninsula.

The measure has a 15-year sunset clause and creates an independent Citizens' Oversight Committee to work with the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District, whose members are elected throughout the Peninsula. Full details about the measure were included in the information mailed to property owners in late May. If you need more information about the measure, or a replacement ballot, contact The Park District at (831) 372-3196.

MAY 2004

By Margot Petit Nickols

COPPER SHEA, 9, was found in a trash can and taken to the local SPCA where she was adopted at 3-months-of age by Rich and Lisa Shea. How could they resist the smiling little bundle of fur they took away to their loving home?

It was Copper's smile that drew me to her Thursday morning at Carmel Beach – that, and a certain familiarity, which was to prove all too true. Copper was a Sandy Claws once before when she was a 4-year-old pup back in 1999. Our readers will have to forgive this lapse of recognition, but as we have photographed and written up well over 250 Sandy Claws since the inception of this column in 1997, and since they all keep growing or getting older, perhaps we can be excused.

At bedtime, Copper wends her way to the spacious family garage, which she shares with the family goldfish, and sacks out on the old living room carpet which has many memories and family fragrances woven into it. The goldfish seem unaware of Copper, and she of them. It's not certain if this is a snubbing contest or a sincere lack of interest. This disinterest on the part of the Shea goldfish is made up for in spades by Copper's brother and sister, students Nick, 17 and Melissa, 20, who love her all to pieces.

Mom and Dad's Carmel Jewelry Studio, in May Court on Mission Street north of Sixth Avenue, is in easy earshot of the fire department. Copper gleefully accompanies the wailing sirens whenever they go off. While keeping vigil at the shop, Copper wages incessant war on dachshund Roxie, a clothes maven whose parents own a store in the court. Both Copper and Roxie believe it's their court exclusively, and therefore defend it with great vigor. Nothing violent, you understand, just vociferous indignation. So far, it's a standoff.

"Carmel Legends"

A curious character who keeps flitting in and out of Carmel history is MARY AUSTIN. Well, perhaps "flit" is not quite the right verb for her activities, because she is described as a "dumpy little woman" who walked the beaches and let her long brown hair dangle to her shoulders. Instinctively we don't like her much, but we admire her independence and her success in competing with the macho men fronted by George Sterling and Jack London. In a time (1900-1915) when women were supposed to be seen and not heard, she was a worthy successor to Eve, Cleopatra, Queen Victoria, Carrie Chapman Catt, Florence Nightingale and Carrie Nation. And possibly an inspiration to Gloria Steinem, Eleanor Roosevelt and Jane Fonda. She came to Carmel in 1905, already the author of a successful book, The Land of Little Rain. In Carmel, she finished her first novel, Isidro, polishing its phrases in a tree house behind her home, which she called a "wick-i-up." She battled Sterling and London on even terms, hit home runs in the Abalone league, and wrote 35 verses for "The Abalone Song." Late in 1907, after less than 2 intense years in Carmel, she became convinced that she was terminally ill and moved to italy to die. That didn't come off. She recovered and drifted back to Carmel through England and New York, arriving in 1913, She was always a storm center and departed finally in 1924 to Santa Fe where she ended her days.

GOVERNOR APPOINTS THREE COASTAL COMMISSIONERS

By PAUL MILLER

MORE THAN six months after he took office, Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger made his first appointments to the California Coastal Commission Tuesday, proclaiming that his three commissioners — the first Republicans on the powerful agency in more than five years — will "represent the interests of all Californians as we strive to protect and restore our coast for the sake of future generations."

One of the new commissioners, Margaret Caldwell, has perhaps the most impressive credentials of anybody to serve on the coastal commission. She is a Stanford University Law lecturer and director of the school's Environmental and Natural Resources Law and Policy Program. She was endorsed for the coastal commission seat by the Natural Resources Defense Council and the Sierra Club, according to the San Francisco Chronicle.

Coastal commissioner and Monterey County Supervisor Dave Potter said that Caldwell, even with her impressive legal credentials, will still have a "big learning curve" when she takes her seat on the commission June 9.

"Law and politics are not synonymous," Potter said, "and there's a lot of politics at the coastal commission, unfortunately."

The two other appointees are Steven H. Kram, chief operations officer of the William Morris Agency, a major Hollywood talent agency which formerly represented Schwarzenegger, and Bonnie Neely, a Humboldt County supervisor for 16 years who served on the coastal commission in the 1980s.

Kram's background on coastal development issues is unknown and his office referred all calls to the governor's office. But as head of a major Hollywood talent agency, he is likely aware of numerous controversies involving the coastal commission and celebrities who own beachfront property.

One of the biggest moguls in Hollywood, David Geffen, for example, sued the commission for trying to open an access easement to the beach in front of his house in Malibu, claiming the easement should be covered by a 1986 U.S. Supreme Court decision that such easements were an unconstitutional taking of private property. The commission defended the easement, saying it was exempt from the Supreme Court decision because it was dedicated before the court ruled. Geffen lost the case in 2002.

And singer Barbra Streisand sued a conservation group for posting on the Internet aerial photos of her cliff-top mansion just west of Malibu. The photo project has been widely praised at coastal commission meetings for its potential to help the commission monitor shoreline development. Streisand, who claimed the photos invaded her privacy, failed to persuade a judge, who dismissed the suit last year.

Neely, previously appointed to the commission in 1988 by Governor George Deukmejian, was considered a moderate by environmental and property owners' groups.

The new commissioners replace three appointees of former Governor Gray Davis: Cynthia McClain-Hill, who Potter called "one of the brightest legal minds we had," John Wooley and Mary Nichols.

Potter said despite the sharp ideological differences that have sometimes split the commission, "we inevitably become friends" and he'll miss colleagues who are leaving.

A fourth seat to be filled by the governor remains vacant. Eight other coastal commissioners are appointed by the President of the Senate, John Burton, and the Speaker of the Assembly, Fabian Nunez.

Unique Monterey Peninsula homes

THE BEST HOUSE: With a basement

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

UNLIKE THEIR counterparts back east, most California houses don't have basements. But that's changing, especially in highly scenic areas such as Carmel, Pebble Beach and Big Sur, where height restrictions sometimes force architects, builders and homeowners to put some of their precious buildable square-footage below grade. In these upscale neighborhoods, however, painted cement block, a rickety wooden staircase and a bare bulb hanging from the rafters just won't do.

To see just how beautiful a basement can be, all you have to do is visit a home for sale on Ocean View Avenue on Carmel Point. Designed by John Mandurrago and Claudio Ortiz and built by Frank Bruno (the owner), the Mediterranean-style home has many modern, upscale touches — limestone countertops, Viking range, Carmel stone and redwood exterior, copper gutters and downspouts, security system and satellite dish — but also some unique features, especially on the lower level.

"What I think is outstanding about this project is how we intermingled the old with the new," said Bruno, who calls the home "Marebello." One example: The doors leading to the basement media room (which comes complete with a big-screen TV) are antiques from France. The stairway to the lower level is finished with Jerusalem stone from Israel. A wine storage vault stands just outside, along with a powder room and laundry room. And even though the area is below grade, a light well, decorated with a trompe l'oeil painting, keeps it from being gloomy.

"I've seen a lot of basements, and this is the best one I've seen," said Paul Brocchini, who has the listing for Coldwell Banker Del Monte Realty.

The Carmel Point home designed by John Mandurrago and Claudio Ortiz and built by owner Paul Bruno features a Carmel stone and redwood exterior and an amazingly luxurious basement (left) set off by antique doors from France and Jerusalem stone from Israel.

Other features in the house, for sale at $4.895 million, are highly unusual. The floors are pecan that was "hewed and chewed," in Bruno's words, giving them a fascinating texture. The bathroom vanities are antiques, as are the stained glass windows. The handmade arched doors are nearly two inches thick.

Bruno said his favorite projects are rebuilding old Carmel cottages. But the new house on Ocean View Avenue is "without question the best I've done." He thanked his former employer, Don McBride, for teaching him how to build quality homes.

"He taught me, and I've taken it a bit further," Bruno said.

LETTERS

Supervisors voted 3-2 on Tuesday to look at other ways of coming up with a workable General Plan Update, putting the brakes on its previous schedule of adoption by August.

Some call the supes' vote a waste of $5 million already spent on the planning process; others call it "cowardice." They've missed the point that it took more guts than any politician has shown in living memory for the supervisors to stop this disaster before we bleed more tax dollars.

Divided among themselves, the supervisors recognized how divisive the draft plan had become and that it would prove to be unworkable in the future. They saw this as not a compromise GPU but rather a GPU that compromised the community.

It's better to show clear leadership and foresight now, rather than wake up and find the county in a permit-process quagmire and without the ability by the county and the cities to create the revenue to provide services for growth that is inevitable no matter what GPU you have.

Special interest groups, including developers and environmentalists, oppose the proposed GPU. You may ask why.

The environmentalists say the plan is not restrictive enough, while their opponents say the plan tramples property rights and shuts the gate on opportunities for residents and their offspring to work here and, perhaps, fulfill the American dream of buying their own homes here.

Groups in the community representing agribusiness, the hospitality industry, labor unions and low-cost housing proponents thanked the supervisors – Edith Johnsen, Fernando Armenta and Butch Lindley – for having the courage to demand a workable planning process. And, the groups have urged supervisors Lou Calcagno and Dave Potter to take another look at the process so that the final product will be one that all of us in the community can embrace.

All elements of our community oppose the current GPU. We all have an interest in the future of our community, in preserving our quality of life, in ensuring a healthy economy and in providing opportunities for residents — this GPU does not do the job!

Oppose the parcel tax

Dear Editor,

The government already has four park systems: federal, state, county and city. The regional park system is the fifth. How many does it need?

Approximately 50 percent of California is owned by government agencies. The Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District has 20,000 acres and thinks that is not enough. All of this land is off the tax rolls, which means the remaining taxpayers have to pay more. We have an acute housing shortage in Monterey County. Don't take more land away from the people. Sell government land to the people instead, so that they may pursue their private dreams. Pity the private citizen who must bear the burden of the government's lust for growth. NO on the parcel tax!

Gary Holzhausen, Salinas

How high can taxes go?

Dear Editor,

It is hard to believe that we are being assaulted by another tax proposal. Sure, it is only $19 a year for the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District, but there will be many other tax proposals on the November ballot. I believe that the politicos realize that big tax increases usually fail, so instead they barrage us with small increases. Many of us have figured out this game plan. We know that all of these nickels and dimes add up over time. For instance, a family of four in 1960 paid less than 5 percent of its income to the federal government. Local taxes were just as low. But today, after years of small increases, we are being taxed out of our homes and jobs. The question becomes paramount: Where is the limit? How high can it go before the taxpayer becomes an endangered species? Let's tell the politicos loud and clear that enough is enough. I hope everyone will vote against this tax increase.

L.K. Samuels, Carmel

'Vote No on district's assessment

Dear Editor,

The Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District has done a good job selling its new parcel tax/assessment, but they haven't sold me. I strongly recommend a no vote on the measure.

Over half the land in California is in public ownership, and rising. The percentage in Monterey County is equally dramatic. How much is enough?

Park District General manager Joe Donofrio recently stated that without the new assessment the district may have to slow its acquisitions. That doesn't sound like a problem to me.

We pay dearly for every acre of land acquired by public agencies. We initially pay the purchase price. We pay in perpetuity for maintenance costs. We pay in lost property tax revenue. We pay in loss of services like education, police, fire and healthcare when money is diverted from them to buy and maintain land.

If voters don't have enough money to fund Natividad Medical Center, how can we have enough to fund ongoing acquisition of land?

The district should consider selling some of its unused holdings back into private ownership to recover misspent funds. A good place to start would be the Mill Creek Preserve. Over six-thousand district voters petitioned for a referendum on the corruption-laden acquisition of the preserve, but the district refused to process the petitions or let the people vote on the acquisition.

Which reminds me, who is overseeing this election? Why isn't there a voter pamphlet with arguments for and against the measure, and an objective analysis?

Mike Caplin, Big Sur

'Cosmetic improvements'

Dear Editor,

Edward Hillyer's letter of last week applauds a "fair homeowner" who would not be stampeded by a scurrilous real estate agent into bumping up his "For Sale by Owner" price of $860,000 — to $940,000.

I applaud Hillyer's faith in his fellow man since, to my knowledge, the only "By Owner" house currently listed for $860,000 was purchased one year ago for less than $500,000. The seller was a little old lady who had recently lost her husband and had to go into residential care. I am a friend of hers.

I walked through her cottage a few weeks ago during a Sunday open house. From my point of view, any improvements were strictly cosmetic — new carpet, paint and some new-but-modest cabinets and plumbing fixtures. Oh, yes, the neglected yard had been landscaped and a small patio added. I estimate (generously) that such improvements could not have exceeded $100,000.

Thus, this "fair homeowner" stands to make only a $260,000 profit. Thank goodness he's not going to be victimized by some nasty, money-grubbing real estate agent.

"Evita," featuring a cast of outstanding local high school performers, presented by Carmel's Forest Theater Guild at the Outdoor Forest Theater, located at Mountain View and Santa Rita. This musical masterpiece by Andrew Lloyd Webber tells the story of Argentina's mesmerizing first lady, Eva Peron. Impoverished at 15 after the death of a father who never married her mother, she escapes her drab existence for the bright lights of Buenos Aires. Driven by ambition and blessed with charisma, she is a starlet at 22, the president's consort at 24, and first lady at 27. She died at 33. Eva Peron was a saint to the working class, reviled by the aristocracy and mistrusted by the military — and never took her eye off her own ambition. For tickets call (831) 626-1681 or visit the website, www.forestttheaterguild.org. Performances May 28, 29, 30, June 3, 4, 5, 6, 10, 11, 12 and 13. Curtain at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $8 for seniors and students; $15 general.

SEPTEMBER

SUMMER-LONG PRGRAMS

Lyceum of Monterey County

With a host of programs for children and families, the Lyceum's summer programs are designed to keep kids learning while they are having fun. This year, they offer a two-week program for kids from second to sixth grade called "Medieval Quest: Castles & Chemistry," and a three-week odyssey called, "Passport to Greece, from Athens to Zeus" to help youngsters get ready to enjoy watching the Summer Olympics from Athens. There are also classes in rock climbing, trout fishing, ham radio, computer graphics, watercolors, kitchen table chemistry, printmaking, bears, butterflies, bees and many more. Programs run from June 14 through the end of July at various locations in the Monterey Peninsula. Call (831) 372-6098 or visit www.lyceum.org.

Cal-State Monterey Bay

Even with state budget cuts, CSU Monterey Bay is offering local residents an array of unique continuing education courses this summer. You can be a "student," the school says, simply by wanting to know more about almost anything.

Beginning in June, a wide-variety of four-week programs will be offered. From "Introductory Sailing" to "Islamic Culture and Values: A Search for Common Ground," and, "Science of the California Missions" to "Satanic Imagery in 19th – 21st Century Russian Literature."

Or, you can introduce an elementary school child to the world in a series of short Saturday morning sessions at the International School of Monterey. Each hour-and-a-half session will be designed for an elementary child (grades K-4) with an adult partner and will include a short slide presentation, a hands-on craft activity, a simple language lesson, and an introduction to the music and arts of the host country. After the lesson, a local restaurant will host a lunch presenting kid-friendly foods of the host country.

Register for either program by visiting http://extended.csumb.edu or by calling (831) 582-4500.

CSUMB also offers morning aquatic camps for boys and girls ages 6 and up, including fun aquatic and pool side activities. Also: swimming lessons at the CSUMB pool in the afternoons. Evening and weekend classes are also available. For more information, call (831) 582-4552 or email pool@csumb.edu

There is also a CSUMB soccer day camp from June 14-18 for boys and girls grades 4-10 at the CSUMB Soccer Complex; a basketball day camp June 21 -24 for boys and girls grades 3-8 at the Otter Sports Center; and a volleyball day camp July 6-9 for girls grades 5-12 at the Otter Sports Center. Call (831) 582-4536 for fee schedule and more information.
